PROFESSIONAL SPORT IN UTAH.

Early this morning the telephone rang and over a party wire came the question:

"Who lost in the wrestling match?" "The public," was the response.

One enthusiast, who has had his sporting blood cooled, said he felt as though he had attended a circus, had purchased a ticket for the side show and remained long enough to have the tent pulled down on his head.

Is it not remarkable that professional foot racing, horse racing, prize fighting and wrestling cannot be freed from the taint of sharp practice? There is one sport the American people are enjoying with full confidence and that is baseball, and the game has been kept clean because it is almost impossible to reduce nine or more men on a team to the level of the trickster.

We know that in the contest yesterday evening the management of the house earnestly labored to prevent a fluke, and the outcome must have been as disappointing to the theatre people as to the public.

COURTESY HAS A VALUE.

Courtesy is an asset which no business man or public servant can afford to lose. Of this we are reminded by the following from the Sacramento Bee:

"A brusque grocer will lose all his custom, fail, and blame it upon 'luck' or 'hard times,' while a polite one will take over the same business and in six months have it flourishing—all because of a little soft soap; whether sincere or not. A man without courtesy trying to run for an office is like an auto with one dead cylinder. Where most successful office-seekers make their mistake is—after being elected—in permitting their appointees to offend everyone except those with apparent influence. It would be well to discharge everyone in public employ who is habitually rough and impolite, no matter what the excuse."

With the approach of the month of June, every one begins to realize that another presidential campaign is upon the country.

The Republican managers are making extensive plans for the Chicago convention and when Mayor A. R. Heywood of Ogden arrives on the scene, he may discover that he, as a delegate from Utah, is to be a party to one of the greatest gatherings of the chiefs of clans ever held under the banner of the party Lincoln helped to create and perpetuate.

The committee arranging for the Chicago convention announces that tickets covering a period of six days have been ordered printed. This is a forecast of a strenuous time, but out of the melting pot should come the pure gold.

DID GREAT BRITAIN MAKE A MISTAKE.

Collier's says Great Britain made a serious mistake in putting to death the leaders of the Irish revolt. The Weekly offers this criticism:

"The swift and merciless killing, after a secret trial, of the madmen who led the Dublin revolution was strictly within military precedent; but so was the shooting of Miss Cavell. Disinterested observers in this country will not fail to compare the rigid severity of the treatment of the poor schoolmaster Pearce and his following of dreamers and striplings with the amiable tolerance shown two years ago to the politicians and generals who were ready to offer armed resistance to the enforcement of an act of Parliament which met with their disapproval. The rebel leader of that day, Sir Edward Carson, is one of the most influential men in English public life. He selects cabinet officers and threatens ministries while the rebel leader of today is shot within a few hours after his surrender and his body thrown in the quicklime."

DISCIPLINE IN THE HOME.

One of the great problems of the home is the control of the children and how this supervision is to be maintained, without an abuse of parental power, is explained by a writer in a magazine, who defines discipline and punishment:

"Often a child is punished merely because he has been disobedient, or angry, or violent, without the larger view that he is punished to teach him that he has done wrong, and to help him to avoid doing so again. Training, not mere punishment, is the great law of discipline. After one has reached maturity and does wrong, he must then suffer retribution; but while a child is growing up all discipline must exist merely in order to teach the child the right way.

"Spencer, in his book on education, tells us that the right way to train a child is to let him suffer the natural consequences of wrongdoing. That is, if he puts his finger in the fire he will be burned; if he tears his clothes, he must mend them or go ragged; if he quarrels with other children, he will soon be left to play alone. But unfortunately, this theory, while effective in its way, ignores the fact that we must take into account the moral law."

AN OGDEN GUN IN THE WAR.

Special correspondents in the European field of carnage repeatedly describe bayonet charges. Why the bayonet is resorted to while more effective weapons of slaughter are to be had, is not explained, except by the statement that "cold steel" is terrifying.

In the fighting in Mexico last Friday, the American soldiers made a dash on a band of Villistas, and they employed the new army automatic forty-five calibre pistol with crushing effect. They rode in to the Mexicans and cut down the surprised bandits with an accuracy utterly demoralizing.

The new army gun is the invention of John M. Browning of Ogden and the United States forces today have 100,000 of the weapons and more are being made.

M. S. Browning, when asked why the warring forces across the ocean were not using the Browning gun, said Russia has 75,000 ready for service and is accepting the pistols as fast as they can be produced in this country.

This summer we may hear of the work of this gun on the Russian front. There will be a German bayonet attack which will be met by the forty-five calibre automatic produced through the inventive genius of an Ogden man, and our forecast is the Teutonic troops will be hurled back.

Two million of those guns on the side of the allies might prove unerring to the soldiers of the central powers and turn the tide of conflict in favor of the entente alliance.

Ogden, though a small spot on the world's map, promises to be written in to the history of the mightiest struggle of all times.

WORLD'S MARKETS

New York, May 17.—Indications of further profit taking were seen at the opening of today's market, prices showing numerous irregular advances and declines. Motor shares, particularly Studebaker were lower and Industrial Alcohol reacted sharply after securing an initial advance. Crucible Steel manifested a fractionally lower. Substantial gains in Mexican Petroleum and Texas Company suggested improvement in the Mexican situation and the strength of Mercantile Marine donated further accumulation. United States Steel and leading rails were barely steady at the outset but hardened later with the balance of the list.

Dealings became more restricted after the early recovery. Studebaker extended its setback to over three points with further pressure against Baldwin, Alcohol and some metal issues. General Electric advanced 3 1/4 to 170 3/4. Bonds were steady with extensive dealings in Anglo-French 5's.

Reports of fresh marine disasters in the foreign zone, involving possible international complications were made the basis of heavy selling in the early afternoon. Some standard shares and numerous specialties broke sharply but rallies followed.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 17.—Suggestions that the damage from Hessian fly had about reached the maximum for this season had a bearish effect today on wheat. Besides, there was gossip that the injury to the winter crop would stimulate spring wheat farmers to push seeding as late as possible. Liverpool reports that buyers were nervous owing to peace talk tended also to handicap the bulls.

Opening prices, which ranged from the same as yesterday's finish to 3-8c lower, with July at $1.17 1/4 to $1.17 1/2 and September at $1.17 1/4 to $1.17 1/2, were followed by a slight rally, and then a moderate sag all around.

Corn showed firmness, the result of country offerings being light. Signs of export demand counted too in favor of the bulls. After opening a shade to 1-4c higher, the market reacted somewhat, but again scored an advance.

On the whole, the market was somewhat bearish, but again scored an advance. On the whole, the market was somewhat bearish, but again scored an advance. On the whole, the market was somewhat bearish, but again scored an advance.

Larger receipts of hogs than expected gave a downward swing to provisions. On the decline, free buying developed, and a sharp rally ensued.

In the later trading no important wheat reaction took place. The close was steady, 3-4 to 7-8c net lower with July at $1.16 1/2 to $1.16 3/4 and September at $1.16 1/2 to $1.16 3/4.

Bears were at a disadvantage throughout the session. Corn prices closed steady at 1-8c to 1-4c net advance.

Chicago Hog Market.

Chicago, May 17.—Hogs—Receipts 43,000; fairly active at 15c under yesterday's average. Bulk, $9.75@9.95; light, $9.50@9.90; mixed, $9.55@10.00; heavy, $9.55@10.00; rough, $9.55@9.70; pigs, $7.40@9.35.

Sugar.

New York, May 17.—Raw sugar, easier; centrifugal, 6.52c; molasses, 5.75c; refined, steady; fine granulated, 7.65c.

Sugar futures were easier and at noon were 3 to 4 points lower on scattered liquidation.

UTAH CONSTRUCTION COMPANY GAINS A DECISION

J. H. Smith, the state engineer of Idaho, in a decision rendered yesterday, confirmed the permit rights of The Utah Construction Company in the waters of the Big Lost river, and its tributaries. This decision is considered important as clearing the way for the construction company to go ahead with the rebuilding of the irrigation system, and the reclamation of about 70,000 acres of land in Blaine, Brigham and Fremont counties.

It will be recalled that this work was undertaken in 1905 by Chicago capitalists, and continued until 1910 when they got into financial difficulties and a mechanic's lien was foreclosed. The Utah Construction company, about a year ago, bought the project in at receiver's sale and last February signed a contract with the State of Idaho providing for the rebuilding of the storage and distributive system and for the sale of water rights to the old contract holders on the new basis. In the meantime some other filings have been made on the water of the Big Lost river, but the effect of the state engineer's decision is to make all of these filings secondary to those of predecessors. The Utah Construction company.

Before financial difficulties overtook the old promoters, the diversion and distributive system had been substantially completed and proof to that effect had been made by the Big Lost River company and investigated and accepted by the State of Idaho, through its state engineer. A number of the later settlers, as well as some of those about whose rights there can be no question, joined recently in a protest to the state engineer against recognizing the permits of The Utah Construction company, fearing that there would not be enough water for all. It is understood that the state engineer's ruling is to the effect that the Construction company's rights have not lapsed, and he refused to set aside the action of his predecessor in accepting the completion-of-works proof made by the old company.

In commenting on the successful result today, an officer of The Utah Construction company said: "The decision of course is gratifying, but we did not see how it could be otherwise and have confidently expected it. It makes no immediate difference in our construction plans. We have one construction camp above Mackay, protecting the partially completed dam against high water and digging a system of test pits designed to show the character of material to be encountered and the physical conditions to be overcome in the reconstruction of the storage reservoir. Another force is engaged in making repairs designed to protect the canals and to provide water this season for settlers who are actually on their lands. Water is already being distributed to dwellers on the Arco tract and will be furnished this season to the Era tract. Our state contract does not call for furnishing water this season and no charge is being made for what we do in this line. The company also has engineers making entire resurvey and examination of the proposed project and also has an office at Arco preparing new contracts in exchange for the ones made by the old company, but which were found impossible of fulfillment. The interior department, through its general land office recently confirmed our rights to the reservoir and canal, and on the showing of progress we made suspended indefinitely all action looking toward cancellation of the filings."
